

Law Actors Newsletter

2007

January 2007

Dear Ian,

Happy new year to all of our subscribers. The folks at Law Actors wish you a healthy and prosperous 2007. Starting this month we will send out our newsletter each and every month. We will try to keep it concise, entertaining and informative. If you have any suggestions on how to improve the newsletter please email us at ian@lawactors.com.

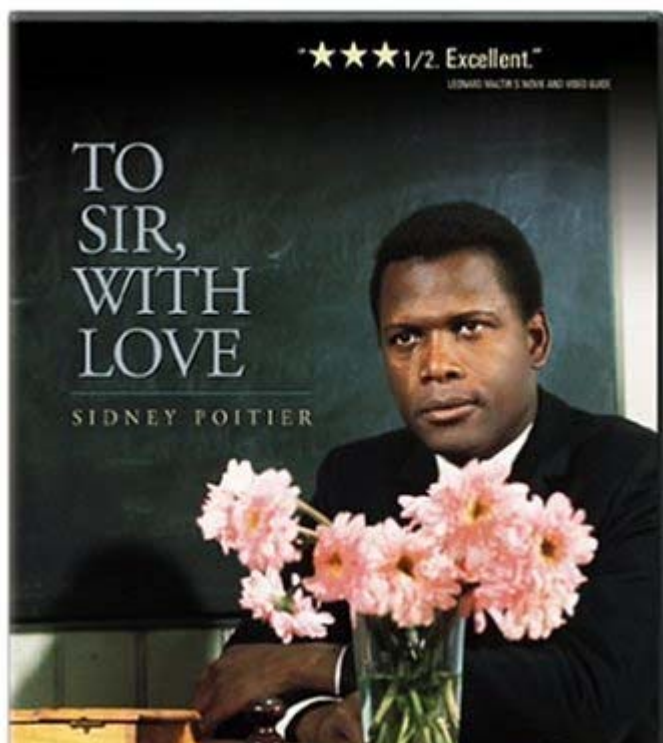

This month we look at movies and the law, the upcoming Academy Awards, a Law Actors update, a classic comic video and a piece from our archives. Enjoy!

They're Here!

Yes, folks, it's that time again. Oscar time that is. Ellen Degeneres will host the 79th Academy Award ceremonies on Sunday, February 25th, at the Kodak Theatre in Hollywood. The nominees will be announced on January 23rd.

The Producers Guild and The Screen Actors Guild have already unveiled their list of nominees while The Directors Guild of America and The Writers Guild will follow with their list this week. To get a short list of nominees and vote for your own favorites click on the link below.

The latest from Law Actors

Law Actors had a very successful 2006 and we are continuing to grow and expand. In the past year Law Actors added the law firms of Katten Muchin and Greenberg Traurig as clients using our deposition training program for their associates, performed mock trial exercises in Florida, Georgia, Detroit and Florida and continued to work with law firms reading evidence depositions at trial in Chicago, Los Angeles, Las Vegas and South Carolina.

In 2007 we will be actively engaged in helping law firms with our Edge Workshop which teaches lawyers how to use storytelling for trial or arbitration settings and we will add a acting class for lawyers looking to improve their skills or just as a refresher course in the basics.
